SUMMARY

I build websites for local businesses that are good at what they do and losing customers to a search result. I design, write and build every Loomwest site by hand, measure it on a phone before it goes live, and stay the point of contact afterward. The standard comes from my day job in civil design and land surveying, where a line in the wrong place is not a matter of taste.

EXPERIENCE

Founder and designer, Loomwest (Gilroy, California)

2026 to present

- Design, copy, build and launch of websites for local businesses at fixed prices, live in three to seven days.
- Eight sites live (seven for clients plus loomwest.com), two more in client review.
- Every launch ships with a private preview and a review form, a privacy page, map links, and visit counting with no cookies.
- Care plans for changes after launch; local ads built and managed for clients; a free Website Report Card for any business.

Design Engineer and Land Surveyor in Training, Faria Engineering & Surveying (Hollister, California)

June 2026 to present

- Civil plan drafting, septic system design and field survey work for residential and commercial projects across Santa Clara and San Benito Counties.

RESEARCH: SENIOR SEMINAR CAPSTONE

San José State University, EnvS 198

Spring 2023

"A comparison of pH, nitrate and phosphate levels found in eutrophied and non-eutrophied ocean zones." Narrowed NOAA's CODAP-NA dataset from 28,208 samples to 780 across seven eutrophied and non-eutrophied coastal site pairs (0 to 200 m), and ran two-way ANOVAs in Excel. Nitrate and phosphate were higher in eutrophied zones; pH was lower overall, most clearly at West Coast sites.
